

Unsung Spokes That Keep Wheels Turning Smoothly Highlighted

HELEN EATON, a supply clerk at Warehouse 10, takes a Telemart order over the telephone from an NWC customer. More than 60 orders per day are placed through Telemart. In addition, Mrs. Eaton handles approximately 115 line orders per day.

LUCILLE HEDDELL, the Industrial Nurse for Michelson Laboratory, gives a blood pressure check to Joe Lechner, an employee who recently suffered a heart attack and has since returned to work. The Industrial Nurse sees to employees who suffer minor on-the-job injuries, or illnesses.

GEORGE DEWHURST sorts mail in the Michelson Lab Mail Room. According to Dewhurst, more than two tons of mail are sorted, routed, and delivered by the Mich Lab Mail Room in an average month.

TELEPHONE OPERATORS of NWC keep the vital flow of communications on the Center moving in an orderly manner. More than 90,000 incoming and outgoing calls are processed by the operators over the WATS, Autovon and Long Distance lines each month. The operators are, l to r: P. Hatton, I. Bridges, L. Anderson, N. Cowan, M. Holmes and M. Simmerman. The 90,000 figure does not include information calls.

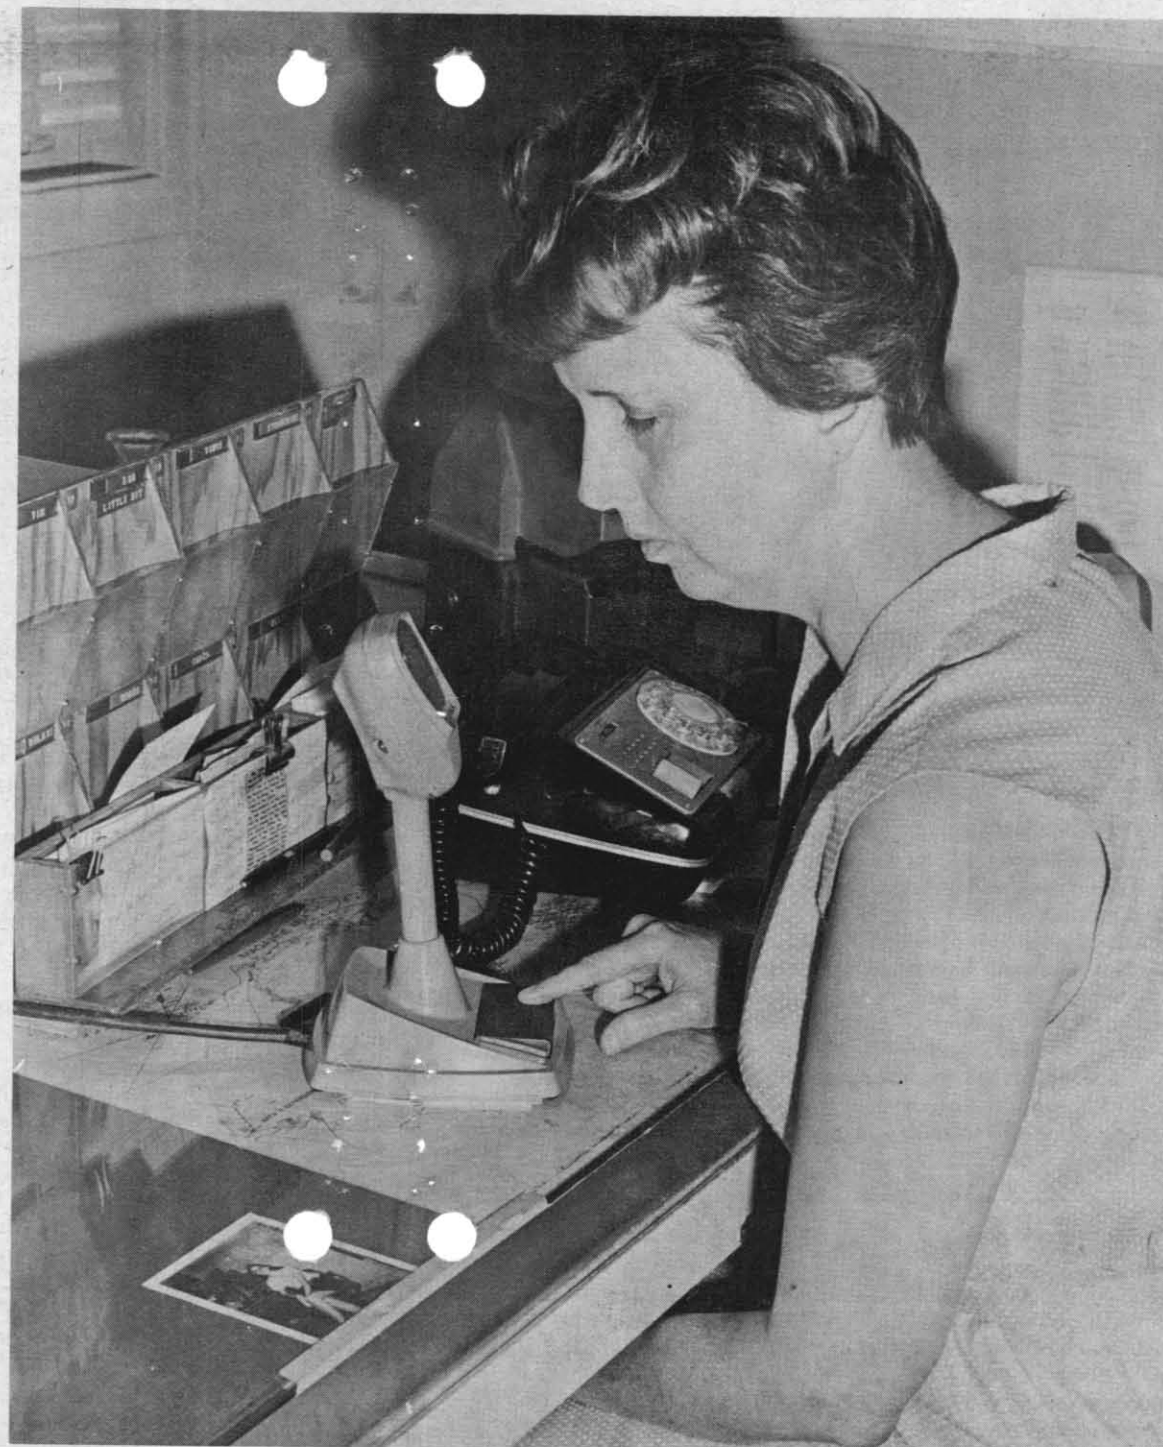

Photos
By
PHAN Ron Mills

CECIL WELCH lists a report following an emergency trouble phone call at the Public Works trouble center. Residents of NWC who experience emergency problems in their homes (such as broken lines, plugged drains, etc.) call Cecil and report the problem. In addition, all Center buildings refer their problems to this outlet. The Public Works facility receives approximately 3,000 such phone calls each month.

BILL PETTEY, r, Inspector of office machine repair for NWC, and Bill Bolinger, a representative of Monroe Co., check out the condition of a machine turned in to the office for repair. The office carries maintenance contracts on more than 3,000 different pieces of equipment on the Center.

FLOSSIE COOPER, Dispatcher of the Taxi fleet operated by Public Works, sends more than 200 taxis per day after NWC employees and contractors who are engaged in official government business. Flossie has been the PW dispatcher since January, 1967.

TONI EVANS, of the NWC Security Department, issues a pass to a visitor. An average of 7,000 such passes are issued each year by the branch. All persons who are not employed by NWC must clear through the main gate pass office before being allowed access to the Center. The pass office is available 24 hours per day.

OFFICER M. T. KIMBALL provides information to a contractor who desires entrance through the Main Gate of NWC. All vehicles allowed on the Center are issued decals, or temporary permits, and each vehicle is checked by the guard at the gate. Officer Kimball is a member of NWC Police.